Howard Wooley Shot Through Both Ankles by One of the Men

MAINES AND DEPUTIES INVESTIGATING CRIME

Shot through both ankles by bank robbers early this morning, Howard Wooley, of Goodells, is lying in a Port Huron hospital.

After seeing a lady friend home from a dance late Tuesday night, Wooley was the victim of a hold-up man in front of the C. C. Peck and company bank, Goodells. The masked bandit ordered the deputy sheriff to throw up his hands. Wooley complied with the request, but when the bandit was off his guard for a fraction of a second the plucky deputy swung hard at the man who was holding a gun under his nose. The blow was a glancing one and when Wooley saw it did not take of feet he started to run. The bandit fired and Wooley was hit. A bullet went through his right foot, and then lodged in his left.

An investigation made by W. A. Wooley, deputy sheriff, revealed the fact that an attempt was made to rob the Peck bank at Goodells. A sledge hammer was found near the safe door in the interior of the bank and the rear door had been smashed in. No clue on which to work has been found by the sheriff or deputies, who were called from Port Huron to the scene.

In an interview this morning, C. C. Peck, president of the United States Savings bank here, and owner of the Goodells bank said: "The safe was badly damaged in our bank in Goodells. The combination and lock were broken off. The damage is entirely covered by insurance, however. There was less money in the safe last night than there has been in several weeks."

C. C. Peck In Trouble

When C. C. Peck, formerly president of the closed U. S. Savings bank, and prominent society man of Port Huron, who fled the city and landed in Reno, Nevada, the macca luring the erstwhile lovers resident of other more straightlaced states, is in trouble, bound by court action to his marriage vows "until death."

If there is anything new under the sun it is born in St. Clair county. In proof, the decision of Judge Wm. Robertson is offered. The Judge holds Peck is a citizen of Michigan when he made application for divorce in Reno, therefore Nevada courts have no jurisdiction. Mrs. Peck setup an injunction restraining Peck from divorce proceedings in Nevada. The Judge's decision sounds reasonable to the open mind, but to Peck it is like a bolt out of a clear sky.

During a robbery attempt at the Peck bank, a deputy was shot through both ankles.

C.C. Peck Bank Move & Restoration

Once the bank closed, it housed several businesses, from a TV repair shop to a video rental store.

After sitting empty for several years, the roof deteriorated, causing the floor and back wall to collapse.

Local Resident Matt Falk started to restore the building then donated to County Parks. Here it is being prepped for the move to the historic village.

The bank was lifted on to steel beams, loaded on to wheel dolly's and was moved the short distance to the park.

Once on its new foundation, it was discovered the brick work on the north side needed to be reinstalled.

Here the brickwork on the north side is near completion.

No historic interior photos are known to exist. Trim and other details were matched using photos of the twin bank that still stands in Smiths Creek.

This after photo shows the same corner seen in the before picture shown at the top of this page.
